

The Role of Carbon Pricing on the Road to Greenhouse Gas Neutrality

Wednesday October 23, 2019

BMU, Stresemannstraße 128, Berlin, Germany

Putting a price on carbon is a key element to successfully and cost-efficiently decarbonizing the global economy. At the occasion of the meetings of the World Bank's Partnership for Market Readiness (PMR) and of the International Carbon Action Partnership (ICAP) in Berlin, this seminar brings together international government representatives, eminent experts and stakeholders to discuss how key jurisdictions are leveraging carbon pricing to drive the low-carbon transition, and how these policies can be designed to safeguard competitiveness and ensure a just transition.
